The Point

ADIRONDACK REGIONAL AIRPORT (KSLK)

The Point rustles up the spirit of the early 19th century – in service, design and décor.

Perhaps one of the more exclusive (no children allowed) FTG Five-Star properties, this Adirondack hideout is a former great camp of William Avery Rockefeller. No signs direct visitors to this intimate camp, helping it maintain its decidedly residential ambiance. However, there is a sense of camaraderie among all guests, as lack of technology (as well as cell service) force people into an electronic detox.

Eleven guest rooms dot the property, each uniquely outfitted with a rustic yet luxurious Adirondack theme. All rooms have a grand fireplace and most have access to a terrace or outdoor sitting area. Guests that arrive at The Point are often well-traveled adventure-seekers who still like to be pampered with fine linens and thoughtful service. If you enjoy glamping, then consider this a level up.

The resort has a splendid location on a 10-acre peninsula on Upper Saranac Lake. From snowshoeing and cross-country skiing to water sports, trail hikes and croquet, you'll find a variety of outdoor activities. Guests have the run of the place and no request is too much. A splendid array of both winter and summer activity programs ensure that guests are hungry for barbecue lunches with white wine around a bonfire – complete with cloth napkins and real china.

The food program is impressive, and crescendos with a nod to the patrician past as guests don black-tie attire twice weekly for an eight-course meal at the communal dining table in the resort's great room.
