Whether it's Manhattan or Brooklyn, remote Niagara or genteel Westchester, the bucolic Hudson Valley or the far reaches of Long Island, New York State offers sumptuous, romantic hotels and resorts to suit all tastes. Here are 10 places to consider for your next romantic retreat.

If solitude together amongst nature be the stuff of love, this is the most romantic spot you'll find. Dating to the early 1930s, this private lakefront Adirondack estate on Upper Saranac Lake was originally built as a so-called great camp for William Avery Rockefeller II. Rustic luxury is still what dominates now that The Point is a resort. A discreet, exclusive resort, that is, with only 11 guest rooms located in the main lodge and in four original log buildings.

Furnished in period style, including many original Rockefeller antiques, and surrounded by the stillness of the forest, simple pleasures are matched by the very best service and finest food and wines. There are no TVs and Wi-Fi only in the main office outbuilding. Whether it's relaxing by the bonfire on the promontory overlooking the lake, boating in a vintage yacht or hiking to Camp David (a cabin serving fireside cocktails), being in the middle of this very special nowhere is not exactly roughing it.
