Sometimes we thrive off the hustle and bustle of the city. Other times...not so much. For those stretches when you and your partner could use some peace and quiet to reconnect, I found 16 couples retreats near NYC that make for an ideal weekend getaway. They include a mix of luxe accommodations and more minimalist stays, places where you can pack your schedule full of restorative spa treatments or antique shop explorations as well as those where sitting back and relaxing is the order of the day. So, whether you want to prioritize good food, good sights or good naps, I've got a recommendation for you.

14. The Point Resort (Saranac Lake, NY)

- Distance from NYC: about 5 hours and 30 minutes
- Price Per Night: from about $2,650
- Amenities: boats, bar, pool table, fireplace lounges, lake views

You'll know you've arrived at this sprawling Adirondack camp by the unique log garden gate. Originally built as a woodsy retreat for the Rockefellers, it's private and intimate with just 11 rustic-luxe rooms, each with its own cozy wood-burning fireplace. You can bet on a romantic and magic-filled weekend for any couple staying here.

The Point Resort is set on 75 secluded acres along the shoreline of Upper Saranac Lake, where each of the rooms are housed in one of four distinctly beautiful, original log buildings, each with a slightly different panoramic lake view. The decor alone will instantly get you in a snuggly mood, and the stylish private baths featuring original brass and chrome fixtures will make you want to slip on a robe, grab a glass of bubbly and relax. "The setting is surreal, the food and drink are absolutely top notch (it is a Relais & Chateaux property, after all), the service is so thoughtful and flawless, and the experience as a whole is something you simply cannot replicate," Jordan Brady, luxury travel advisor and founder of Journey Bound Travel Co. tells me.
